FIVE CARD SPREADS

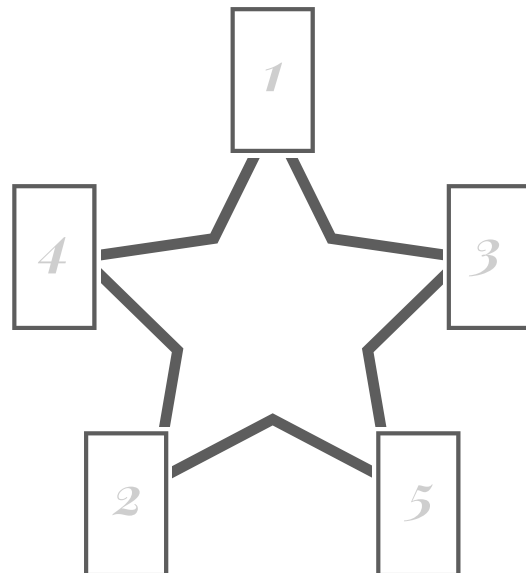

Types of Five Card Tarot Spreads to Try

Five card spreads can take many different shapes and forms. Cards are often read in different orders depending on the spread, rather than just left to right as with most three card spreads.

- The Cross:
 - 1: Past
 - 2: Present
 - 3: Future
 - 4: Cause of Situation
 - 5: Potential Resolution

- The Pentacle:
 - 1: Background information: what prompted this question?
 - 2: Outcome if the current path is followed
 - 3: Challenges being faced in this situation or question
 - 4: Clarity: what needs to be known or performed to overcome the Challenges
 - 5: Ultimate Goal

...is free form, for whatever shape or number of cards you may choose to work with during a tarot session. There is a title line to name your work, and a large lined portion for your interpretation of the number of cards you choose to work with. The card space at the top is left blank so you can draw your own diagrams of your card placement, use stickers, or however you'd like to use the space!

TAROT REFERENCE SHEETS

The following reference sheets...

...list keywords to help you remember the symbolism of each card in your tarot deck, compiled from my own studying, reading, and notetaking over the years. Remember, these meanings are to be used as guides, not necessarily a hard and fast rule. Different artists and readers also sometimes use different terminology for the same suits - for example, pentacles are sometimes referred to as coins, or swords as blades.

Use these keywords alongside your own intuition and knowledge of a particular situation to come to the best resolution possible. I have left a little space for each card for you to write your own keywords and themes too - your own reminders and feelings surrounding a particular card will always be the best!

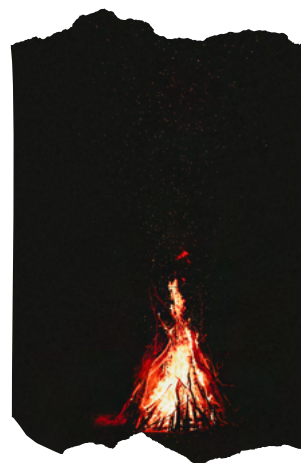

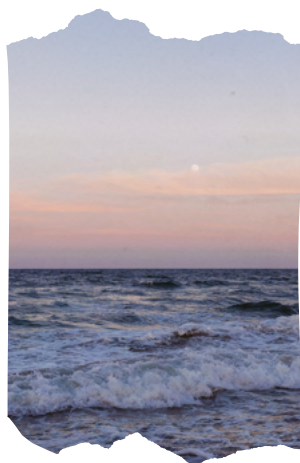

Each suit within your deck has associated elements...

The suit of cups highlights emotional themes and intuition and is associated with the element of water.

The suit of swords highlights intellectual themes and communication and is associated with the element of air.

The suit of pentacles highlights themes of the material world and nature and is associated with the element of earth.

The suit of wands highlights themes of creativity and ambition and is associated with the element of fire.
